Getting the best fingerprints

A quick guide for scanners and ink-pad prints

1 Scanner & Laalie app

Use the scanner to take and organise your prints. We recommend taking several, so we can choose the clearest one for engraving. If the print looks very light, press a little firmer. Try more than one finger, as some fingers give better ridge detail than others.

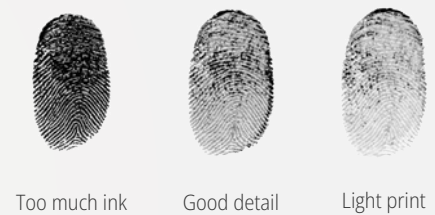

2 Ink pad prints

Use plain, smooth paper only. Ink the finger once, then take three prints on the paper without re-inking. The darkest print is not always the best - too much ink can fill in the fine lines.

3 What to send

Please send at least 3 prints or scans. Do not worry if some look too dark or too light; different versions give us options when converting the fingerprint into clean engraving artwork.

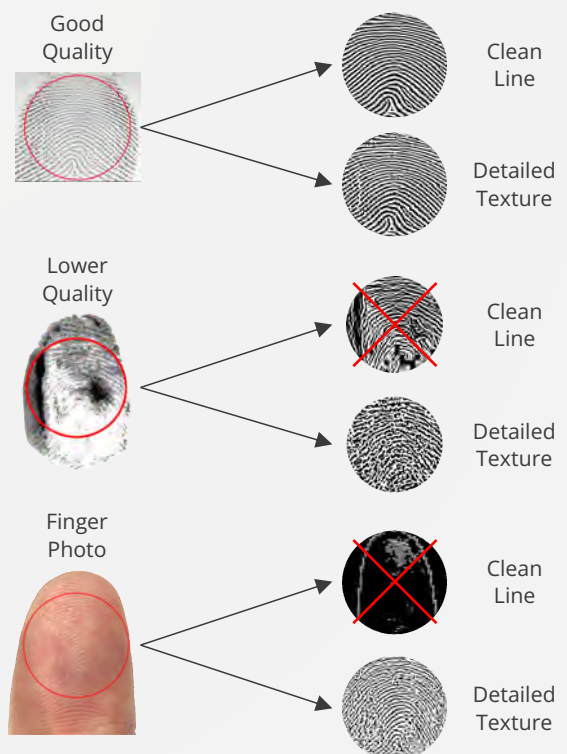

4 Print quality

Clear, good-quality fingerprints are usually engraved in our clean line style. Prefer the detailed texture style? Just add a note in the additional information box when ordering.

If a print is lighter, softer or less clear, we can use our detailed texture method to keep as much original detail as possible.

This is especially helpful for memorial prints, where taking another print may not be possible. Our specialist software helps us recover usable detail from very faint prints, lower quality prints, and even photos of fingers or hands.

Print quality affects the final engraving style, as shown in the examples. Clear prints can usually be prepared as clean line artwork, while lighter or less defined prints often work best with our detailed texture method.

Same finger used throughout for comparison.
